THE GOLD FIELDS.

An important discovery of gold in the Western District has been made, and the excitement it has caused is a matter of public interest. The discovery was made by a party of miners who had been working in the region for several weeks. The area in which the gold was found is situated on the banks of a river, about ten miles from the nearest town. The gold was discovered in a quartz vein, and the miners have already worked up a considerable quantity of it. The discovery has been reported to the authorities, and measures are being taken to ensure the proper exploitation of the gold. The area is accessible by river, and the miners have already established a camp near the site of the discovery. The government is considering the possibility of granting a licence to the miners, and the area is expected to be opened for public prospecting soon.
