Sydney Morning Herald

ASIO inquiry begins on May 2

The Federal Health Department has announced that ASIO's investigation into the operation of the state's child care services is being extended to include the medical records of children in care. The agency is expected to release its findings in the next few weeks.

Custody laws could copy British Act

By John Brough

The Federal Government is expected to introduce a new bill to enable court orders for the return of a child to be made in cases where it is in the best interests of the child to remain with the other parent or in the child's best interests. The bill would replace the current law in the Child Support Act and other relevant laws.

Igniting a passion for science

By Bill Norman

Medical scientists have identified promising new treatments for cancer that could be developed into medical research.

Scientists wary of breast cancer push

By Bill Norman

Medical researchers warn that push for breast cancer research is premature. The push could lead to false hopes and misdirected resources.

Two very good reasons why you should play more games with us this weekend

Computer fraud to be ‘AFP focus’

DARWIN: The Northern Territory Police Commission is to investigate the use of software and computer systems to conduct illegal activities, including computer fraud.

Fines total $4000

A flour mill owner who pleaded guilty to selling flour that contained a level of lead exceeding the legal limit was fined $4000 in court. He was also ordered to pay $4000 in compensation to the affected customers.

Yes! We are available to make house calls over this long weekend

Advance Bank

We are here to help you 24/7, even on weekends and public holidays.

National Library of Australia