Plans made in the last decade are ‘irrelevant’ to 21st century

ACT blueprint needs review: NPCA boss

By GRAHAM COCKE, City Region

Canberra could no longer go ‘backwards in the way it’s been labelled in present government documents’, the National Capital Planning Authority, Michael Reilly, said last week.

Mr. Reilly said the city’s planning authority, which he heads, had been labelled in present government documents as a planning body.

And the time had come for a fundamental review of the city’s planning body, he warned.

“Under the proposed plan, Canberra would be allowed to continue to grow,” Mr. Reilly said.

“Under the proposed plan, Canberra would be allowed to continue to grow,” Mr. Reilly said. “It’s about time we took control of what’s happening.”

New boy in town bringing a fresh approach

The new chief executive of the National Capital Planning Authority, Michael Reilly, with Canberras “no new plan for the city”.

He said his first priority was to “bring a fresh approach” to the planning of the city.

The ACT government has been conducting a review of the city’s planning policies and Mr. Reilly said he was looking forward to bringing a fresh approach to the planning of the city.

Pianist slams Australia’s ‘mediocrity’

From Continued Page 1

“Whoever was planning this was really not very imaginative,” Mr. Reilly said.

“If we’re going to have a real planning authority, we’ve got to get rid of that,” he said.

“If we’re going to have a real planning authority, we’ve got to get rid of that,” he said. “We’ve got to get rid of that, and we’ve got to get rid of the old, outdated planning laws.”

Uproar over reported Liberal Party plan for ACT freehold

From Continued Page 1

“The ACT government has been very much a part of the team in the ACT,” she said.

“We’ve got to get rid of the old, outdated planning laws.”

The ACT government has been very much a part of the team in the ACT, she said. “We’ve got to get rid of the old, outdated planning laws.”

ACT leasehold title more secure than freehold land in some states

From Continued Page 1

I was on the fence about the whole thing, but in the end I decided that it was time to move on. I had been in this town for too long, and I knew it was time to make a change.

I was on the fence about the whole thing, but in the end I decided that it was time to move on. I had been in this town for too long, and I knew it was time to make a change.

Keating’s vision cut down by 5th Pacific logging nations

From Continued Page 1

The sawmill was closed down and the loggers were laid off.

Keating had been due to give a speech at the United Nations’ meeting on the environment, but he stayed away.

Keating had been due to give a speech at the United Nations’ meeting on the environment, but he stayed away.

Staying with us, Sydney’s attractions are at your doorstep.

$129

Fyshwick Fruit and Vegetable Markets

The Original and Still the Best

New Bazaar Style Market

Stalls available both Saturday & Sunday

START UP ~ late OCTOBER

We want camel traders, banjo players, buskers, dealers in antiques & curiosities etc

Golf plans put to vote

The threat of a referendum on the construction of a new golf course at离子 it’s a meeting of residents to decide whether the course should be built.

The Liberal and National Party leaders are expected to be present.

The Liberal and National Party leaders are expected to be present.

Packer heart attack report

SYDNEY: Former AFL hardman, Gary Packer, collapsed a backyard heart attack on Friday, according to a retired police officer.

The former AFL player, who had been working as a security guard at a retirement village, was taken to hospital where he was pronounced dead.

The former AFL player, who had been working as a security guard at a retirement village, was taken to hospital where he was pronounced dead.

Timber jobs

SYDNEY (11 NEWS) - A timber job report released yesterday found that the state’s timber industry was in crisis, with thousands of industry jobs lost.

The timber industry report found that the state’s timber industry was in crisis, with thousands of industry jobs lost.

The timber industry report found that the state’s timber industry was in crisis, with thousands of industry jobs lost.