SOVIET ARMS FOR TRIBES IN MIDDLE EAST

From Joseph Stiwall alumni

Washington

Recent messages from the British Embassy in Washington, D.C., have been received by the Department of State. The messages indicate that the British government is preparing to sell arms to several Middle Eastern nations in order to counter the threat from the Soviet Union.

RUSIA AND NORTH AMERICA

It has been obvious from the start that the British government could not admit the Soviet Union's claims for aid to ship. One of Russia's main aims since the outbreak of war has been to win friendship and stabilization to stem the tide of commissioners. This is being done by meeting the demands of several Western nations, including the United States, for financial aid to the Soviet Union.

The proposal to sell arms to the Middle Eastern nations is aimed at countering the spread of communism. The British government believes that the sale of arms will help to stabilize the region and prevent the spread of communism from the Soviet Union to other parts of the world.
