DANGER SIGNALS

Although President Truman's plan for universal military training is opposed in Australia, the trade union opposition in America is in evidence, showing that American minds are awake to the dangerous nature of the situation which makes the announcement of such a scheme necessary. The "waxing worse" attitude adopted by many Republicans, for example, is not opposed to immediate voluntary enlistment; and a good few of the press's readers object to the impact of universal training industry rather than to the possible victory of the country on an adequate home front.

Confidence in God Would Unite Mankind

Confidence in God’s promise to all nations that the world would be a place of peace, love, and happiness, would result in the world's peoples being unified, according to the writer. The writer argues that if people had confidence in God, they would be more willing to work together towards a common goal of peace and prosperity.
