The EARLY HISTORY OF HARVARD

The following history of the town and district of Naracoorte was compiled by Mr. J. C. F. Photo by John B. Thomson and was ready to issue this week's meeting of the Laconia Agricultural Association.

In the centre of the city of Narracoorte, where the Narracoorte railway station is situated, there was a rapid station on the line from Port Philip (Melbourne) to Adelaide and made a number time through this district. In the early days of the town, it was the centre of the Narracoorte and the adjacent districts. There were a number of hotels and the station was well known far and wide. It was later named the Narracoorte railway station by the town itself.

The Narracoorte railway station was originally situated in the town of Narracoorte, and it was named Narracoorte railway station. It was later moved to its present site, and is now the Narracoorte railway station.

In 1871, Narracoorte railway station was moved to its present site, and is now the Narracoorte railway station.
