September 25, 1886.

THE LEADER.

POULTRY AT THE ALBERT SHOW.

Visitors to this show who were in attendance on Tuesday, accompanied by the Agri.-Mort. & Mechanics' Exhibition, will be able to obtain the advantage of observing a large collection of poultry. Among the birds shown are turkeys, geese, ducks, &c., and a special feature is the variety of hens and roosters. The birds are well cared for, and the exhibition is well arranged. The visitors should pay particular attention to the hens and roosters, as they are amongst the finest specimens to be seen in the show. The hens are well groomed, and the roosters are well dressed. The visitors should also pay particular attention to the turkeys, as they are amongst the finest specimens to be seen in the show. The turkeys are well groomed, and the exhibition is well arranged. The visitors should pay particular attention to the geese, as they are amongst the finest specimens to be seen in the show. The geese are well groomed, and the exhibition is well arranged. The visitors should pay particular attention to the ducks, as they are amongst the finest specimens to be seen in the show. The ducks are well groomed, and the exhibition is well arranged. The visitors should pay particular attention to the hens and roosters, as they are amongst the finest specimens to be seen in the show. The hens are well groomed, and the roosters are well dressed. The visitors should also pay particular attention to the turkeys, as they are amongst the finest specimens to be seen in the show. The turkeys are well groomed, and the exhibition is well arranged. The visitors should pay particular attention to the geese, as they are amongst the finest specimens to be seen in the show. The geese are well groomed, and the exhibition is well arranged. The visitors should pay particular attention to the ducks, as they are amongst the finest specimens to be seen in the show. The ducks are well groomed, and the exhibition is well arranged.