100-mph Motoring
If Post-war Roads
Are Planned Now

LONDON, Monday—In a few years
our roads, motoring for pleasure will again be in full swing. More motoring for many more millions, in fact.

Although this article by Field Marshal
Lord Alexander
in the London Daily Mail was circulated with the motto "courage for the millions"
of the people involved,
the comments made
here are applicable in Australia.

The Government is
now planning to build
roads in Australia
that will accommodate
traffic at 100 m.p.h.,
and it is expected
that the roads
will be ready
by the end of the year.

Danger to be
leaves the
road at high
speeds. To prevent this,
the Government is
planning to install
speed traps
along the roads.

Mr Cleary's
Resignation

There has been some rumour that Mr Cleary may resign his office. However,
Mr Cleary has denied
these reports,
stating that he
will continue
his position.

Home Front "Hates"
Of Servicemen
BY R. B. LEONARD
Drop into any place where servicemen gather and it's a reasonable bet that they'll find someone who would go back tomorrow, if they could, to the real life of England.

And you won't find it difficult to imagine soldiers of the 1940s in their original uniforms to regale their friends in the chapel, rehashing their ailments.

It is, of course, not true that all servicemen
hate being away
from home,
but there are
a few who wish they
hadn't
gone away.

Petty Issues
Some of the things
that annoy
servicemen
are the same as
those
that
annoy
people
at home.
