The desire to see all Australians receive a fair go is what motivated Dorothy Hutton to move to politics.

With that in mind, she has now become the Pauline Hanson’s One Nation preferred candidate for the seat of Rodney in the approaching by-election, yet to be formally announced, Victorian elections.

“We are all Australians and we believe in a fair go for everyone,” she said.

As a Christian I believe that as a nation we walk in the eyes of God’s sight.

Mrs Hutton, 54, has just moved into Rochester but is familiar with the area having grown up in Mildura with family in the district. She has lived in Victoria for 16 years and has a background in dairy farming and small business ownership.

Mrs Hutton joined One Nation after becoming disillusioned with the policy direction of the major parties.

“I’ve been a Labor supporter all my life,” she said.

I started thinking and I realised, hey, what is happening here.

“Multi-culturisation has gone far too far. We need to be united and not in little groups.

Having only joined the party 17 months ago, Mrs Hutton moved quickly through the ranks of the party by becoming elected onto the NSW State Executive as Women’s Convenor for Country Women and later into acting state secretary.

The campaign is also familiar territory to Mrs Hutton as she fought the Sydney seat of Mortar in the recent NSW elections held in March.

“We got the second highest number of votes,” she said.

“If the Liberals did deal with us on preferences they would have won the seat.

“The didn’t speak to us and Labor won the seat.”

Mrs Hutton’s policies are based heavily on the retention of services in country areas with health, education, fuel prices and pensions high on the agenda.

“They are being eroded from country areas,” she said.

“People are sick of being represented in parliament by people who grew up with a silver spoon in their mouth,” she said.

“They don’t know how to face the tough scares.

Mrs Hutton, who believes the election will be held in July, will kick off her campaign with a public meeting in Cohuna on Tuesday, May 25. An Echuca meeting will be held at a later date.

The desire to see all Australians receive a fair go is what motivated Dorothy Hutton to move to politics.

With that in mind, she has now become the Pauline Hanson’s One Nation preferred candidate for the seat of Rodney in the approaching by-election, yet to be formally announced, Victorian elections.

“We are all Australians and we believe in a fair go for everyone,” she said.

As a Christian I believe that as a nation we walk in the eyes of God’s sight.

Mrs Hutton, 54, has just moved into Rochester but is familiar with the area having grown up in Mildura with family in the district. She has lived in Victoria for 16 years and has a background in dairy farming and small business ownership.

Mrs Hutton joined One Nation after becoming disillusioned with the policy direction of the major parties.

“I’ve been a Labor supporter all my life,” she said.

I started thinking and I realised, hey, what is happening here.

“Multi-culturisation has gone far too far. We need to be united and not in little groups.

Having only joined the party 17 months ago, Mrs Hutton moved quickly through the ranks of the party by becoming elected onto the NSW State Executive as Women’s Convenor for Country Women and later into acting state secretary.

The campaign is also familiar territory to Mrs Hutton as she fought the Sydney seat of Mortar in the recent NSW elections held in March.

“We got the second highest number of votes,” she said.

“If the Liberals did deal with us on preferences they would have won the seat.

“The didn’t speak to us and Labor won the seat.”

Mrs Hutton’s policies are based heavily on the retention of services in country areas with health, education, fuel prices and pensions high on the agenda.

“They are being eroded from country areas,” she said.

“People are sick of being represented in parliament by people who grew up with a silver spoon in their mouth,” she said.

“They don’t know how to face the tough scares.

The desire to see all Australians receive a fair go is what motivated Dorothy Hutton to move to politics.

With that in mind, she has now become the Pauline Hanson’s One Nation preferred candidate for the seat of Rodney in the approaching by-election, yet to be formally announced, Victorian elections.

“We are all Australians and we believe in a fair go for everyone,” she said.

As a Christian I believe that as a nation we walk in the eyes of God’s sight.

Mrs Hutton, 54, has just moved into Rochester but is familiar with the area having grown up in Mildura with family in the district. She has lived in Victoria for 16 years and has a background in dairy farming and small business ownership.

Mrs Hutton joined One Nation after becoming disillusioned with the policy direction of the major parties.

“I’ve been a Labor supporter all my life,” she said.

I started thinking and I realised, hey, what is happening here.

“Multi-culturisation has gone far too far. We need to be united and not in little groups.

Having only joined the party 17 months ago, Mrs Hutton moved quickly through the ranks of the party by becoming elected onto the NSW State Executive as Women’s Convenor for Country Women and later into acting state secretary.

The campaign is also familiar territory to Mrs Hutton as she fought the Sydney seat of Mortar in the recent NSW elections held in March.

“We got the second highest number of votes,” she said.

“If the Liberals did deal with us on preferences they would have won the seat.

“The didn’t speak to us and Labor won the seat.”

Mrs Hutton’s policies are based heavily on the retention of services in country areas with health, education, fuel prices and pensions high on the agenda.

“They are being eroded from country areas,” she said.

“People are sick of being represented in parliament by people who grew up with a silver spoon in their mouth,” she said.

“They don’t know how to face the tough scares.

Mrs Hutton, who believes the election will be held in July, will kick off her campaign with a public meeting in Cohuna on Tuesday, May 25. An Echuca meeting will be held at a later date.

The desire to see all Australians receive a fair go is what motivated Dorothy Hutton to move to politics.

With that in mind, she has now become the Pauline Hanson’s One Nation preferred candidate for the seat of Rodney in the approaching by-election, yet to be formally announced, Victorian elections.

“We are all Australians and we believe in a fair go for everyone,” she said.

As a Christian I believe that as a nation we walk in the eyes of God’s sight.

Mrs Hutton, 54, has just moved into Rochester but is familiar with the area having grown up in Mildura with family in the district. She has lived in Victoria for 16 years and has a background in dairy farming and small business ownership.

Mrs Hutton joined One Nation after becoming disillusioned with the policy direction of the major parties.

“I’ve been a Labor supporter all my life,” she said.

I started thinking and I realised, hey, what is happening here.

“Multi-culturisation has gone far too far. We need to be united and not in little groups.

Having only joined the party 17 months ago, Mrs Hutton moved quickly through the ranks of the party by becoming elected onto the NSW State Executive as Women’s Convenor for Country Women and later into acting state secretary.

The campaign is also familiar territory to Mrs Hutton as she fought the Sydney seat of Mortar in the recent NSW elections held in March.

“We got the second highest number of votes,” she said.

“If the Liberals did deal with us on preferences they would have won the seat.

“The didn’t speak to us and Labor won the seat.”

Mrs Hutton’s policies are based heavily on the retention of services in country areas with health, education, fuel prices and pensions high on the agenda.

“They are being eroded from country areas,” she said.

“People are sick of being represented in parliament by people who grew up with a silver spoon in their mouth,” she said.

“They don’t know how to face the tough scares.

Mrs Hutton, who believes the election will be held in July, will kick off her campaign with a public meeting in Cohuna on Tuesday, May 25. An Echuca meeting will be held at a later date.