How to occupy land profitably.

At a recent meeting of the Apple Yaralla branch of the Agricultural Bureau, Mr. J. M. Guppy, of the Bureau, addressed the meeting on the subject of the cultivation of tobacco.

"It is an important question for producers who possess more land than they can cultivate profitably," he said. "It is also a question which is vitally necessary to be considered for the future, as the demand for tobacco is likely to increase in the future, and the cultivation of tobacco is a lucrative occupation which can be carried on with great success.

"The discussion usually revolves around the idea of the cultivation of tobacco, but it seems to me that, unless we are to depend excessively upon this one crop, we must consider other possibilities, such as the cultivation of potatoes and other vegetables."

Fanciful papers I find people have been bold enough to think of such crops, but I am not aware that any of them have been sufficiently studied to enable us to arrive at a satisfactory conclusion.

"It is not necessary to be too optimistic, but it is necessary to be more realistic."

For instance, what is the position of the potato crop, as it is now being grown in the United Kingdom? I do not think it is doing as well as it used to do, but it is not doing as badly as it used to do."

"In conclusion, I believe that cultivation of tobacco is a profitable occupation, but it is not one that should be undertaken without due consideration.

"The most important thing is to ensure that we have a sufficient supply of tobacco for our own needs, and not to overproduce it, as this would only lead to a decrease in the price of the crop."

PM IN MANAGEMENT.

In Newfoundland, there has been a marked improvement in the farming system of the new pigs brought to market in recent years. Many of the older breeders are now using a new method of rearing pigs, which is known as the "tip-and-run" method.

The pigs are reared in well-stocked pens, and the young pigs are separated from the mother at an early age. This system has proved to be very successful, and the young pigs are now reaching a high standard of health and fitness.

In addition, the pigs are now being fed on a diet of different sorts of food, which has proved to be very beneficial. The pigs are also being kept in good health by the use of modern medicines and treatments.

This system has proved to be very successful, and the piggery is now producing a high quality of pork, which is being sold at a good price in the market.

The new pigs are now being sold to farmers all over the country, and the demand for these pigs is increasing every year.
