RESTRICTION OF SANDALWOOD CUTTING

(From the West Australian)

One of the most important objects of the biennial Parliamentary system is the sheath which it provides to address legislation. The two principal items in the callosum of the session are the two laws of the sandalwood, and the alterations that have been made in the last session. The present document is the second law of the sandalwood, the first being the law of the sandalwood of 1877, which was passed in the same session. The present law is a consolidation of the two previous laws, and it is intended to make the law more effective by removing some of the defects that have been pointed out in the previous laws.

The law of sandalwood is, in fact, the most important law of the West Australian Parliament, and it is the law that is most frequently cited by the judges and lawyers of the country.
