The Railway Accident in Hobart.

L. Miller, the editor of the Daily Mercury, writes us as follows:-

"The gathering continued all the night, and the constables were kept busy answering the inquiries of the crowd, which was quite large. The only accident was the breakdown of a number of carriages. It is stated that these carriages were not in good order, and that the accident was caused by their being out of repair. The railway company will, no doubt, take steps to prevent a recurrence of the accident."
