To the Editor:

I read with interest your recent article on the history of the Broadmeadows Tennis Club. However, I must say that I find it somewhat disappointing that your account seems to gloss over the many years of hard work and sacrifice made by the players and volunteers who have contributed to the club's success.

As a former player myself, I can attest to the dedication and commitment that goes into running a successful tennis club. It is a labor of love that requires constant attention and effort to keep the club thriving.

I am writing to express my concern about the current state of the courts. Despite the efforts of the club, the facilities have not received the attention they deserve. The courts are in dire need of maintenance and repairs.

I urge the club to take action and invest in the necessary repairs to ensure the continued success of the Broadmeadows Tennis Club. The players and the community rely on the club for a place to play and socialize.

Sincerely,
