DARTMOOR'S CENTENARY
1836—1936.

Enthusiastic Celebrations & Colorful Pageantry.

A highlight of modern celebrations in which people have taken part was the pageantry and enthusiasm that greeted the arrival of the party of Major Mitchell. The event was marked by a parade of bullock carts, with cattle. The party was accompanied by a band and flags. The arrival was seen by many spectators who lined the streets to see the procession. The parade was followed by a pageant, with scenes from the early days of settlement.

Saturday's Brilliant Pageant.

The pageant was a spectacular sight, with costumed performers enacting scenes from the past. The crowd was thrilled by the sight of the early settlers in their period costumes. The pageant included a parade of early vehicles, with horses and buggies. The event was a fitting tribute to the pioneers who built the town.

PRIMITIVE DARTMOOR.

The evening concluded with a display of traditional, primitive dances and music. The performance was a memorable experience for all who were present. The music was played on instruments such as the didgeridoo and the clapsticks. The dancers performed intricate patterns and moves that were characteristic of the early settlers.

Dartmoor's Centenary was a time of celebration and reflection on the history of the town. The event was a testament to the resilience and determination of those who laid the foundations of the town. The community came together to honor the past and look forward to a bright future.
