THE STRANGE STORY OF A FIJI ISLAND CURSE

A Planter Who Made Friends With a Ghost in a Dream Found That Things Happened in Real Life

Mr. White, the planter, was a good man. He was kind and generous, and he had many friends in his little village in Fiji. But one day, he had a dream that changed his life forever.

In his dream, he met a strange looking man who introduced himself as a ghost. The ghost told Mr. White that he had been cursed by a witch who lived in the village. The witch had placed a curse on the village, and now it was Mr. White's turn to suffer.

Mr. White tried to wake up from the dream, but he couldn't. He felt a strange energy around him, and he knew that the curse was real. He asked the ghost what he could do to break the curse.

The ghost told him that he must find the witch's house and destroy it. Mr. White did as he was told, and he destroyed the house. But the curse didn't go away.

Then the ghost told him something that made him think. He said that the witch's curse was not just for the village, but for the whole world. Mr. White realized that he was the only one who could break the curse.

He went back to the village and told the people what had happened. They were scared and didn't want him to do anything. But Mr. White was determined. He knew that the only way to break the curse was to destroy the witch's house.

He asked for help, and the villagers joined him. They built a big bonfire and burned the house. As soon as the fire started, the curse was broken. The village became peaceful, and the people were happy again.

Mr. White was hailed as a hero, and he continued to live in the village. He never forgot the lesson that the ghost had taught him. He understood that the world was in need of kindness and love, and he continued to spread it wherever he went.
