A GREAT fire has been extinguished in the suburbs of Hobart Town which destroyed the store of Mr. Carver, situate on the corner of the High Road and the Main Road. The fire was discovered on the 20th instant, and the buildings were immediately surrounded by a large force of firemen, but the flames had by that time spread so far as to make the destruction complete. The store was a large structure, containing various articles of merchandise, including clothing, furniture, and household goods. The loss is estimated at several thousand pounds. The proprietor, Mr. Carver, is a prominent merchant in the city, and the fire has caused much regret and sympathy among his fellow citizens.

The fire is said to have been caused by a spark from a railway engine, which was passing through the town at the time. The engineer in charge of the engine is being searched for, and it is hoped that a reward will be offered for information leading to his arrest. The fire department has been called out and is doing all that can be done to prevent the spread of the flames.

This is a terrible blow for the city, and the people are united in offering condolences to the sufferer. The fire has caused much destruction, and it is feared that the damage will be much greater than at first estimated. The city's insurance companies have been notified, and they are sending agents to examine the premises and assess the loss.

The city has declared a day of mourning, and the mayor has issued a proclamation calling on all citizens to refrain from all non-essential activities on this day. The fire department has been placed on a state of alert, and additional fire engines and personnel have been deployed to the scene.

Several citizens have offered their assistance in the form of labor and supplies, and they are being given the opportunity to do so. The city has also requested volunteers from the army and navy to assist in the firefighting efforts.

The city's officials are conducting an investigation to determine the cause and extent of the fire. The city has also launched a fundraising campaign to aid those affected by the disaster. The community is encouraged to contribute what they can to support those in need.

In conclusion, this is a tragic event that has affected the entire city. The people are coming together to support one another and to help in any way possible. The city is committed to rebuilding and restoring what has been lost.
