The author, John Norcott, writes about the events at the time of the Murray River Gordon War. He mentions the capture of a boat named Eagle, the division of the river into two parts, and the firing at the labellers and the people on the river. He also describes the situation at the time and the events that occurred, including the death of one of the boat's crew members. The author provides a detailed account of the events, suggesting that the war was not as straightforward as it might seem at first glance.

The text is a historical account of the Murray River Gordon War, which took place in 1823. The author, John Norcott, describes the events leading up to the war and the subsequent battles. He provides a detailed account of the events, including the capture of a boat named Eagle and the division of the river into two parts. The author also mentions the firing at the labellers and the people on the river, and provides a detailed account of the events that occurred. The text is a valuable source of information about this important event in Australian history.