THE CITY AND THE PORT OF LAUNCESTON

PIONEER TIMES TO PRESENT

Development Was Steady

The hub of Tasmania is Launceston, the northern capital. The city enjoys tremendous natural advantages due to its geographical position. If the Launceston Tamar is the finest river of the country, the city was established to control access to the port. Launceston was the first town to be given municipal status in 1832.

In 1815, Lieutenant John Oxley was the first European to set eyes on the beautiful city of Launceston. In 1818, a small settlement of some 300 people was established. By 1842, there were 10000 residents. Today, Launceston is the centre of the North East region with a population of 70000.

TAMAR RIVER'S HISTORY

Fine Waterway

Launceston is surrounded by a magnificent river with a great capacity for fruit and vegetable production. The city is famous for its fine waterway, which is a fine place to live. The city has a long history of economic development, beginning with the construction of the Launceston Public Buildings in 1867.

LAUNCESTON STREETS

Landmarks That Vanished

Launceston's streets are full of history, with landmarks that have disappeared over the years. The city has a rich architectural heritage, with many old buildings still standing. The city has a long history of economic development, beginning with the construction of the Launceston Public Buildings in 1867.

SOCIAL PROGRESS

The city's greatest achievements in the 19th century were the completion of the railway to the port and the new alumina plant. In 1856, the city's first newspaper, the Launceston Advertiser, was founded. The city has a rich history of economic development, beginning with the construction of the Launceston Public Buildings in 1867.

EARLY SHIPPING ON THE RIVER

Why was this the first steamship to enter the river? The steamship was the first vessel to enter the river, and it was used to transport wool and other goods. It was a time of great progress for the city, and it was a symbol of the city's economic development.

The Tamar River provided a link between the city and the surrounding areas. The river was ideal for transport, and it was used to transport goods and people. The river was also used for recreation, and it was a popular place for fishing and boating. The river was a symbol of the city's economic development, and it was a symbol of the city's future.