FOUR YEARS AGO

1956, the Montefiore Institute, a well-known children's hospital, was closed due to insufficient funding. The hospital had been in operation for over 50 years and had treated thousands of children.

The closure was a blow to the local community, and there was much protest over the decision. Many families had grown up knowing Montefiore, and it was a place of safety and care for their children.

However, the institute was eventually reopened thanks to a generous donation from a local businessman.

Today, the Montefiore Institute is thriving, providing essential services to children and families in the community.
