THE NORTHERN ARGUS, JULY 2, 1869.

INTERCOLONIAL NEWS.

VICTORIA.

In connexion with the proclamation of the Province of Tasmantina, occupying just now a large share of public attention in the colonies, Mr. T. J. Bannister, M.P., during half an hour yesterday in the House for the Colonies, talked at length of the advantages that would accrue to the colony from the acquisition of so large a portion of the south-eastern coast of Tasmantina, and of the immense wealth that would be contributed to it by the settlement of large numbers of inhabitants upon the soil. He said that the colony of Tasmantina was well adapted to the purposes of agriculture and industry, and that the advantages that would accrue to the colony from the settlement of large numbers of inhabitants upon the soil would be immense.

In a report of the Committee of the Royal Geographical Society on the subject of the survey of the south-eastern coast of Tasmantina, the committee recommended that the survey should be commenced at once, and that the survey should be completed as soon as possible.
